

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE work, now at length completed, has cost us many years of labour, —labour that has often seemed almost hopeless.

A very slight inspection of it will show that it aims at a far higher standard of accuracy and completeness than any of its English predecessors. Indeed, it can hardly be said to have had any predecessor in its own kind; for no English-Latin Dictionary hitherto published has even professed to give any account of the use of the words set down, their synonymical distinctions, the niceties connected with their employment by classical writers, with such remarks and cautions as a cursory glance at any important word in the following work will prove that it has at least attempted to supply.

The title-page states that it is founded upon the German-Latin Dictionary of DR. CHARLES ERNEST GEORGES, of which the first edition was published at Leipsic in 1833; the third, in 1845. That work consists of two octavo volumes, usually bound together in one very thick volume of 1820 pages. Dr. Georges had a predecessor of great merit in DR. FREDERICK CHARLES KRAFT. As, however, the only edition of Kraft's Dictionary that we have consulted is the fourth edition ('remodelled and enlarged'), which appeared at Stuttgart in 1843, we cannot state exactly how far Dr. Georges is indebted to the earlier editions of Kraft's work, which, in its present form, is the most copious of all the German-Latin Dictionaries, consisting of two very thick octavo volumes, which contain respectively 1426 and 1509 pages. Though we have occasionally consulted Kraft with benefit, we are decidedly of opinion that Georges is considerably superior to him in clearness of arrangement, and in the combination of sufficient fulness with a sound principle of selection; nor do we hesitate to give the preference to Georges even on the ground of scrupulous accuracy, though the occasional instances of inaccuracy that we have detected in Kraft are very rare exceptions to the general character of his work. Dr. Mühlmann, who published a German-Latin Dictionary in 1845, is almost entirely dependent upon Georges.

With respect to other helps, the 'Anti-barbarus' of Krebs, Döderlein's 'Synonymical Hand-book,' and Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' have been our constant companions. We have also derived considerable assistance from Bonnell's 'Lexicon Quintilianæum;' and have often consulted with advantage Haase's notes to Reisig's 'Vorlesungen,' Hand's 'Tursellinus,' and Krüger's 'Grammatik der Lateinischen Sprache.' Amongst other works, of which we have occasionally made use, we may mention Billerbeck's 'Flora Classica,' Kraus's 'Medicinisches Lexicon,' Ernesti's 'Lexicon Technologiæ Latinorum Rhetoricæ,' with Crusius's 'Vollständiges Wörterbuch' to Cæsar, and Billerbeck's to Cornelius Nepos.

About 150 pages of the work were printed off before either of us became aware that the other was engaged in the same task, and was drawing his materials from the same sources. For that portion of the work Mr. Arnold alone is answerable. When a joint publication was resolved upon, the portion (A—C), which Mr. Riddle had but recently sent to press, was withdrawn, and we exchanged the materials that each had prepared for the half which was to be executed by the other; but, to speak generally, Mr. Arnold is responsible for the first half, from A to K (inclusive), and for the letter U; Mr. Riddle, for the remainder. Mr. Arnold has to thank W. Frädersdorff, Esq., of the University of Berlin, for very useful assistance rendered to him during the progress of the work. Mr. Riddle has also some acknowledgements to make to the same gentleman; and is still more indebted to his own brother, the Rev. John B. Riddle, M.A., of Wadham College, Oxford.

We are very conscious that the work is still far from perfect ; but we feel a just confidence, founded upon the excellence of Georges' Dictionary, and a consciousness of our own diligence, that it possesses the general merit of strict accuracy, and is the only English-Latin Dictionary that a student can consult with the reasonable hope of finding what he wants, and the certainty of being able to trust what he finds.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE THIRD EDITION

It has been judged expedient to annex an Index of Proper Names to the Lexicon, instead of publishing one in a separate form. Such an Index has been appended by Professor Anthon to his American reprint of our work, and we have gladly availed ourselves of his labours in this edition of the Lexicon. It "has been prepared," as the Professor tells us, "from the best sources ; but more particularly from Quicherat's 'Vocabulaire des Noms Géographiques, Mythologiques et Historiques de la Langue Latine,' Mühlman's 'Verzeichniss der Geographischen, Mythologischen und Geschichtlichen Namen,' Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' Klotz's 'Handwörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache' (as far as published), Sharpe's 'Nomenclator Poeticus,' Leusden's 'Onomasticon,' &c., and Bischoff and Möller's 'Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der alten, mittleren, und neuen Geographie.'"

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.

cs = alicujus.
qam = aliquam.
qo = aliquo.

 cs, ci, &c., alone = the gen. or dat. of a person.

cs rei, ci rei = the gen. or dat., respectively, of a thing.

aby = any body.

athg = any thing.

cmly = commonly.

fm = from.

g. t. = general term.

Jn. = the words are found in this connexion and order.

r. pr. = the proper word.

wch = which.

C. = Cicero.

H. = Horace.

L. = Livy.

Np. = Nepos.

O. = Ovid.

Q. = Quintilian.

S. = Sallust.

T. = Tacitus.

V. = Virgil.

The names of other authors are abridged in the usual way,—Cæs., Ter., Plin., &c. When Plin. stands without "Ep." (= Epistles), the Natural History of the elder Pliny is meant.

Auct. Herenn. = the author of the 'Rhetorica ad Herennium,' amongst Cicero's Works.

Cod. Theod. } = Code of Roman laws drawn
Cod. Just. } up by command of Theodosius and Justinian, respectively.

Dig. = Digests (the body of Roman laws).

Inscript. = Inscriptions. Inscript. Orell. = Orelli's Collection of Latin Inscriptions.

JUt. = Juris Consultii (with reference to technical terms of Roman law).

* prefixed to a word or phrase means that it is not found in a Classical author, but is the best substitute the compilers can give. Very many phrases to which this note is prefixed are from Muretus, Ruhnken, Wyttenbach, &c. Kraft has been very industrious in collecting these.

The meaning of a phrase printed thus: See 'make way for,' is, See the phrase 'make way for,' under WAY.

The initial letter of the word at the head of an article represents that word. The 3rd sing. of a verb, or the plur. of a substantive, is represented thus (supposing the word to be 'DRIVE') d.'s.

ALL, omnis (every, all: pl. omnes, all, without exception: opp. nulli, pauci, aliquot, &c.).—cuncti (all collectively, considered as really united: opp. dispersi, sejuncti). Hence in the sing. it is used only with collective nouns: e.g. senatus cunctus)—universus, universal (all, as united in our conception: opp. singuli, unusquisque. It excludes exceptions like omnes, but with more reference to the whole, than to the separate units that compose it). *Hic omnis Italia, geographically: Italia cuncta, Ag. = all the inhabitants of Italy.—ALL is also expressed strongly by two negatives, nemo non, nullus non, nemo with quin.—e.g. all see it, nemo non videt: all did it, nemo est, quin fecerit. 1 All = each, quisquis, quisque (each one, the predicate being asserted of each and all alike).—quisvis (any one, without selection, but one only).—unusquisque (each single one). Thus: in all places, quoque loco. I had rather suffer all manner of evils, quidvis malo pati. 1 When ALL stands with an adj. to denote a whole class, the Romans generally made each individual prominent by the use of the superlative with quoque. All the best men, optimus quisque. 1 ALL = whoever, whatever, quicumque: 'que a. who are engaged, will know, quicumque proelio interfuit, v. let. See quod with est or habeo) with the gen. A. the time I can spare fm my forensic labours, quod mihi de forensi labore temporis datur: I sent to the Praetors to bring you all the soldiers they had, ad Praetores misi, ut, militum quod haberent, ad vos deducerent. 1 ALL = any, after without (e.g. 'without all doubt'), ullus (for such the Comic writers and Or. ut v. omnis). If a negative precedes, aliquis or omnis. 1 All in all, or ALL used substantively, may be transl. in various ways: e.g. his son is a. in a. to him, filius ei unus omnis est; filium fert or gestat in oculis: he has lost all, eversus est fortunis omnibus. 1 AT ALL: omnino, prorsus: after negatives, nihil (the negative being untransl.). ALTERNATE, v. alternare (cum qo): alternare vices (O.).—qd qd re variare (e.g. otium labore; laborem otio).

ALTERNATE, adj. alternus. A. acts of kindness, mutua officia. beneficia ultro citroque data et accepta.

[On a days, alternis diebus. A. anglos, *angulū sibi oppositū.

ALTERNATELY, alternis (abl. of adj.: Varr. not C. one after the other).—in vicem, per vices (when several follow immediately after others)—simul esse invicem, in viciis each other alternately (C.).—vicissim (in turn: on the other hand) does not belong here: and vices belongs to poetry and late prose. mutuo is 'reciprocally,' mutually.

ALTERNATION, alternatio (Post-class.).—vices (pl.), vicissitudo,—permutatio (change), varietas. A.'s of fortune, fortunes vicissitudines, varietas: of the seasons, temporum vicissitudo, varietas: of day and night, vicissitudines diurnum, nocturnumque; vicissitudines diurnum nocturnumque (C.).

ALTERNATIVE. There is no word for it; but the notion may be expressed in various ways. 'Peace or war is our only alternative,' inter bellum et pacem nihil medium est (C.). 'Either he must be punished by the state, or we enslaved: there is no other alternative,' res in id discrimen adducta est, utrum ille poenas reipublice iust, an nos servitium (C.). To offer abey an alternam conditionem et proponere.

ALTHOUGH, etsi (= 'even if,' the concession made in here simply a supposition: if considered as really arising, the indic. is used; if merely as possible, the subjunctive).—etiāmi (a fuller and stronger etsi = 'yes even if,' 'even if'). Etiāmi and etsi differ nearly as 'though' and 'although'.—tamen etsi or tamēti (gives prominence to the improbability of the co-existence of the supposition and the asserted consequence: it is often followed by tamen, which has then the force of 'yet nevertheless').—quamquam (= 'however much' the supposition really exists: the real existence of the supposition being granted, it takes the indicative in the best writers)—quāvis ('however much' you, the person addressed, may possibly imagine the concession to exist really: hence in Cic. only with the subj.).—quāquam and quāvis can only be used with adjectives, adverbs, and verbs, whose notion can be supposed to exist in a heightened degree of intensity.—licet (= 'granted the thing be so: let it be so, if you like' allowing a supposition, the correctness of which the speaker does not in any degree maintain in himself; but allows the person addressed to maintain if he pleases: it is an impersonal verb, and takes the subj. governed by ut omitted. It may occur in other tenses: thus, deirahat auctori multum fortuna licebit: and C. has quāvis licet. N. D. 3, 36: Tuer. 4, 29).—Though correcting or limiting a previous statement, or adding to it some circumstance to be kept in view in the application of it, is, quāquam, less frequently etsi; the conjunction standing at the head of a sentence, which is then more than a mere subordinate clause. Thus confer te ad Manlium: infer patris bellum. Quāquam quid ego te invitent, &c. (C.) Deo, do, poenas temeritatis merē: etsi quē fuit illa temeritas? (C.) Quum (with subj.), properly denotes the co-existence of two apparently inconsistent states, &c.—Ut has also the meaning of although (ut desunt vires, tamen est landanda voluntas. O.) and no of 'although—not' (e.g. ne sit summum malum dolor, malum certe est. C.) A.—yet: etsi ut—ita (ut quies certaminum erat, ita ab apparatu operum ac munitionum nihil cessatum. L.).

ALTITUDE, altitudo,—excelsitas,—sublimitas (all three prop. and fig.)—proceritas (prop. 'tallness,' height in reference to growth. See SYN. in HIQ.)—elevation (fig. elevation: e.g. animi). | A. of a mountain, altitudo or excelsitas montis; or, if the highest point is the most, fastigium.

ALTOGETHER, | Completely, &c. prorsus (opp. 'in some degree,' or 'almost'; quite, without exception).—omnino (opp. magnā ex parte, &c.: completely, quite; also 'altogether'—in one lot (e.g. vendere), opp. separatim. Pitā.)—plane (quite: opp. per se: e.g. plane par: vix—vel plane nullo modo. C.)—in or per omnes partes, per omnia (in every respect).—penitus (through and through; thoroughly; quite: e.g. amittere, perspicere, cognoscere, &c., opp. to magnā ex parte, and to 'superficially').—funditus (from the foundations; utterly: esp. with verbs of perishing, destroying, overthrowing, defeating, rejecting, depriving). A. in great measure, omnino aut magnā ex parte.—With ref. to a person, altogether may be translated by the adj. totus. 'He is altogether made up of falsehood and deceit,' totus ex fraude et mendacio factus est. | = All together, cuncti (all collected together: opp. dispersi).—universi (all taken together, wherever they may chance to be: opp. singuli). | in all, omnino (e.g. omnino ad ducentos. C.):—in summa (Drusus erat—absolutus; in summa quatuor sententia. C.).

ALUM, ALUMEN. Containing or impregnated with a., aluminatus, aluminosus. One engaged in procuring or preparing a., aluminarius (Inscr.). A.-water, aqua aluminata.

ALUMINOUS, aluminatus, aluminosus.

ALWAYS, semper (opp. numquam).—usque (always, within a definite limit: semper represents time as a space; usque as a continuing line. semper = omni tempore: usque = nullo tempore intermissio; continenter).—perpetuo (of uninterrupted continuance to the end of a space of time). | With superlatives always is translated by quisque: 'the best things are a., the rarest,' optimum quidque rarissimum est. | Sis always is used hyperbolically for 'nearly always,' 'mostly'; it may then be translated by plerumque, or by a periphrasis with solere. He a. arrives too late, plerumque sero venit. I a. take a walk at this time, hoc tempore ambulare soleo. But is this may be expressed by the simple present or imperf.: e.g. post cibum meridianaum—paullisper conquelescebat: to be a. at a place, frequenter esse qo loco; assiduum esse qo loco or circa locum.

ANGLE, talus. Reaching to the a.'s, talaris (e. g. tunica).

AND, et (= kai: joins words and notions, each of which is considered independently, and as of equal importance). —atque, ac (add what is of somewhat more importance: ac not before vowels or h: very seldom before g. C. Fam. 12, 7). —que (= et: joins a word closely to another as an appendage to it). AND at the beginning of indignant questions is et (et quilaquam dubitabit, &c. l). AND is often untranslated: 1) when it unites single notions of the following kind: a) in certain combinations of frequent occurrence: e. g. 'horse and man', equi viri: 'men and women', viri mulieres. So ventis temis, &c. b) Before the last term of an enumeration, when the preceding terms are not connected by 'and'. 'Our country was preserved by my labours, counsels, and dangers', patria laboribus, consiliis, periculis meis servata est. There were present Greeks, Romans, and others', aderant Graeci, Romani, alii. AND The particle 'and' is, however, inserted before the last term of an enumeration, it being omitted before the others, when that expression is the whole clause, to which the preceding terms are related. c) Between the names of consorts it is sometimes omitted. In English we often connect by 'and' sentences that relate to different times, or the latter of which is a consequence of the former, or describes a subsequent action of a person mentioned in the former. Such sentences are in Latin either, a) connected by the rel. qui: e. g. 'a messenger came and announced', venit nuntius, qui nuntiabat: or, b) the subordinate sentence is turned into a participial clause: 'he came forward and spoke thus', in medium prodians haec locutus est: 'he left the city and retired to his country house', urbe relictā in villam se recepit: or, c) causal particles are used, ubi statements stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect, occasion, and consequent action, &c.: e. g. 'Xanthippus was sent to aid the Cithaynians, and defended himself bravely', Xanthippus, quum Carthaginiensibus auxilio minus esset, fortiter se defendit. 'I saw him, and immediately recognized him', postquam eum aspexi, illico cognovi. AND SO; AND ACCORDINGLY; itaque, ita quod only (to intimate the rapid succession of the second ovaf. ¶ AND AS IT WERE, et quasi, or lrs emly tanquam never atque (ac) quasi or tanquam, Stüren-berg. ¶ AND ALSO, et—quoque (e. g. et sarmenia quoque in merce sunt)—nee non (to connect sentences: they should stand separately. They are not used in the best prose to connect two nouns like a simple rt). If two adjectives or other attributions are spoken of one noun, a and also is translated by idemque, et idem (e. g. musicus idemque philosophus). ¶ AND YET, et tamen; atqui (at the beginning of a sentence). ¶ AND THAT, et, isaque: if 'and that' relates to a verb or to a whole sentence, idque should be used (negotium magnum est navigare, idque mense Quintili). ¶ AND NOT, nec or neque; et nō; ac non (nec or neque when the negative refers to the whole of the second sentence: et non ac non, when it belongs more particularly to a single word or notion in it or when the 'and' is very emphatic. ac non emly when the notion in the second clause corrects, or is opposed to, a notion in the first: e. g. we must use reason, a and nō follow the distorted rule of custom, adhibenda est ratio, nec utendum pravissima consuetudinis regula: it would be tedious and is not necessary to relate, longum est et non necessarium commemorare. I would write to you that great length, if the thing needed words, and did not speak for itself, pluribus verbis ad te scriberem, si res verba desideraret, ac non pro se ipsa loqueretur). ¶ In such a sentence as, 'it is A and not B', it would be quite wrong to express the 'and' in Latin: e. g. tū culpā factum est, non meā (not tū culpā factum est, et non meā). ¶ AND NOT RATHER, ac non or ac non potius. ¶ AND NOBODY, and NOTHING; and NEVER, &c. nec quicumque, nec quidquam, nec umquam, if the negative belongs to the whole sentence; et nemo, et nihil, et numquam, when the negative belongs to the single word. ¶ In sentences of parallel construction, e. g. A does this, and B does that; &c., the 'and' should be translated by autem, which is a weak adverbial particle, e. g. volupates impellere, quo velit: autem te vellet, deducere.—versutus eos appello, quorum mens celeriter versatur, callidos autem, quorum mens—usu comestul.

ANY. (1) When all are excluded, quicumque et ullus (1) quicumque is used in the sing. only, and as a substantive, never as an adj., except with personal nouns [e.g. scriptor, hostis, civis, homo!], and, in Cic. personal nouns of multitude [e.g. ordo, genus hominum, leatō]. (2) Quicumque or ullus is used in negative sentences; in questions where the answer 'no' or 'none' is expected; and after 'than', 'scarcely'. After 'without', 'any' is aliquis in a negative, ullus in a positive sentence. — 'Any' when all are included (i.e. any you please), quilibet, quivis (quivis implies a deliberate thought/not choice; quilibet, a blind, inconsiderate one. — neque enim fuit quod tu plus providere posses, quam quivis nossem, any indiscriminately). — 'Any' after si, nisi, nē, num, quo, quanto, is generally the indefinite quis; but aliquis is used when the 'any' is emphatic. — Si quis = 'if any body', without any emphasis; si aliquis = 'if any body', be he who or what he may (relating to quality); ut quisquam = 'if there be any one, though no more (relating to quantity), generally implying that there is probably none'. [Any in interrogations is often equis? so after querere, cunctari, &c. 'do you ask whether there is any hope?' queris aliqua spes sit? [equis or equi, equa or equae, equid or equod? — as adj.] Any (body) in interrog. an quisquam? (Ter. Q.) quisquam? (Q.) Any = 'some one or other', 'some', aliquis, quispiam, aliquispiam. ((1) aliquis, aliqua, adj., subst.; aliquis or aliqui, aliqua, aliqui, adj. (2) aliquispiam, quispiam [subst. and adj.] relate to a multitude, intimating that it is immaterial which individual of that number is thought of. Any single person; any one singly; unus quilibet, quilibet unus, unus quisvis. [After a neg. 'anybody', 'anything' are often omitted before a rel. clause: 'I have not any to send, or whom I can send', non habeo quem mittam. I do not think any can smile in these times, non puto esse, qui his temporibus ridere possit (C.).

ANY, with adverbs. Any where, aliqui, uspiam, usquam with the same distinction as between aliquis, quispiam, ullus. [At any time, aliquando, quando (the latter when there is no emphasis; especially after si, nē, quo, num, &c.): umquam (after negatives, in questions expecting the answer 'no': after 'than', 'scarcely'). Any where you please, ubique: if anywhere, sicubi (of rest); aliquo (of motion). Any where = any whither, aliquo quoquam, quouquam, usquam (with the same distinction as between aliquis, quispiam, qui-quam, ullus). I'm any where, alioquin. If I'm any where, sicunde. AS, I) [As a particle of comparison: ac, atque (after words denoting equality, similarity, &c.: æque, item, par, &c.): quam (if exact equality is not meant, but excess or defect. Thus if a negative precedes æque, &c., quam must be used, not ac, atque, for the negation destroys the exact equality. Heronog. Cæs. B. G. 2, 6).—et, ut, and (after idem) ac, atque, et, qui, reld. cum (as in Sall. and Tac.). We cannot maintain friendship unless we love our friends as ourselves, amicitiam tueri non possumus, nisi æque amicos et nosmet ipsos diligamus: is what a situation our affairs are, you know as well as I do, quo in loco res nostræ sint, juxta morum omnes intelligitis: they go away the same men as they came, iidem abeunt, qui venerunt. [After such, so great, so many (talis, tantus, tot), not quem but qualis, quantus, quot. He is such as he ever was, talis est, qualis semper fuit. [In forms of protestation and swearing: 'as true as,' ita or sic with the subj. followed by ut, with the subj. if a wish is to be expressed, the indic. if an assertion is to be made: 'as true as I live, I shudder,' &c., ita vivam (or ita deos mihi velim propitios), ut—perhorresco (or (with ita vivam thrown in parenthetically) perhorresco, ita vivam, &c. 'As true as I am alive, I should like,' &c., ita vivam (or ita mihi omnia, quæ opto, contingat) ut velim, &c. [As (so) WELL as: et—et; tam—tum; quum—tum (with quum—tum, the clause with quum is the more general, that with tum the more special statement). Sic ut—sic; non minus—quam. [tam—quam in this sense does not belong to the present age.] Not so—AS, non tam—quam. The Romans waged some wars not so successfully as bravely, Romani bella quædam non tam feliciter quam fortiter gesserunt (or Romani bella quædam fortius quam feliciter, or magis fortiter quam feliciter gesserunt).—Cæsar is not so prudent as he is brave, Cæsar fortior est quam prudenter (which allows him some prudence: magis fortis est quam prudens or fortis est quam prudens. The form fortior est quam prudenter is that which belongs to the best age). [As—so: ut—ita or sic: quemadmodum—eodem modo: quemadmodum—sic; velut—sic or ita. [As MUCH AGAIN, alterum tantum: this is as big again as that, hoc altero tanto majus est. [As MANY as (=all who), quotcumque: AS MUCH as, quantumcumque. [As SOON as: simul et or ac (atque), simul ut. also simul alone.—ut, ut primum, quum primum.—ubi (when).—postquam (after).] All these take the perfect indic. in narrative where we should use the pluperf.; but when repeated actions or continued states are described, the principal verb being in the imperf., the verb with postquam, &c. may be in the pluperf.—[stimulac se remiserat—reperlebat. Np.] [As (=as if), as if: tamquam. I depart from life as from an inn, ex viti discedo, tamquam ex hospitio.]

II) As a particle of explanation. [As if; just as if: tamquam: tamquam si; veluti; haud secus as si: non aliter quam si (all with subj.): the men scolded together as if something of great importance were in hand, tamquam summi momenti res ageretur, ita concurrerunt homines. Its an abl. abs. is used: the enemy pursued as if the victory were already won, hostes insecuti, quasi partâ jam victoriâ. [As if FORSOOTH: AS IF (ironically), as if forsooth I thought this, quasi vero id putem. [To denote a property: tamquam (expressing equality in point of manner and degree: 'as much as,' as if?)] ut (the relation, 'as far as'): hoc (in the place of): instar (as good as, of equal value or weight with): nomine (under the name of). I love you as a friend, amo te ut amicum (so far as you are my friend): tamquam amicum (as much as a friend; as much as if you were my friend): ut be as a son to aby, sibi loco esse ci: to be to aby as a father, ci parentis numero esse. Its other forms must be used: e.g. we must do as physicians do, medicorum ratio or consuetudo imitanda est. To carry off as so much gain, lacri nomine tollere qd. Plato is, in my judgement, as good as all of them together, Plato est mihi instar omnium.—As with a substantive is here often translated by an adverb or by in modum. To behave as a woman, muliebriter se gerere: to act as a slave, serviliter agere: to obey as slaves, in modum servorum parere: to torture a free citizen as a slave, civem servilem in modum cruciare. [As; AS BEING. Here the property contains also the ground of the preceding statement, and quippe, quippe qui, utpote qui, are used. Quippe is often used with something of irony, and before participles or other attributives only (Democrito, quippe viro erudito, &c.): quippe or utpote qui may take subj. [Pract. Intr. II. 814.] They did not trust their own valour, as being men who had been often routed, non—sua virtute confisi sunt, quippe toties fuit fugatique. [As is often untranslated: e.g. with such verbs as to consider or took upon: as, this must be looked upon as the greatest evil, hoc maximum malum existimandum est: h' is looked upon as a very just man, justissimus vir habetur. [As is also untranslated when—in the character of, or when I was. He dedicated, as dictator, the temple of Salus, which he had vowed when consul, ædem Salutis, quam consul voverat, dictator dedicavit. [As FOR INSTANCE: ut; velut: veluti. Animals which are born on land, as for instance crocodiles, bestium quæ gignuntur in terrâ, veluti crocodili: even the gods waged wars, as for instance with the giants, dii quoque bella gesserunt, ut cum gigantibus.—Sic vel is used in this sense: raras tuas quidem sed snaves accipio literas: vel (as for instance) quas proxime accepi, quam prudentes, &c. [Pract. Intr. II. 542.]

III) As a particle of time. [As—when: quum, ut, ubi. [Ubi marks a point in time in which something began: ut, an event which was succeeded by another: quum, the coincidence of two facts, so that either both happen at the same point of time, or a momentaneous action introduced by 'as' either happens whilst another is still going on, or is immediately consequent to it. See EXCURS. II. to Grotefend's Materials.]—Ut and ubi take the indic. (when no other reason requires the subj.) my the perf.—quum also takes indic. of pres. and perf. (and also with the imperf. and pluperf. of repeated actions—as often as); but in simple narrative has the subj. of imperf. and pluperf.—Very often the verb with 'as' is trans. by a participle, which will be in abl. absol. when the two propositions have not the same subject. [As OFTEN as: quoties. quum with indic. even of imperf. and pluperf. [Quum quampiam cohors ex orbe excesserat, hostes velocissime refugiebant. Cæs.] [As LONG as: tam diu—quam or quum diu: usque adeo—quoad.—as relat. quumdiu (e.g. tenuit se uno loco quumdiu fuit hiems)—quoad (all the time until; as long as). [As—whilst, dum, or by partic. of pres. [As SOON as. See AS, I].

IV) As a causal particle—since: inasmuch as: quoniam (indic.).—quum (subj.): quando; quandoquidem (indic.).—See SINCE.

V) AS TO; AS CONCERNING; AS TOUCHING, &c.: quod attinet ad. quod; stis de. ad. As to the book, which your son gave you, quod ad librum attinet, quem tibi filius dabit. As to retaining our liberty, I agree with you, de libertate retinendâ tibi assentior. As to (or, as for) Pompeia, I would have you write, if you think good, quod ad Pompeianum, si tibi videtur, scribas velim. As to my Tullia, I agree with you, de Tullia meâ tibi assentior. As to your praying that &c., (nam) quod pre-catus es, ut &c. [As TO, before infin. after 'so,' 'such,' ut: after a neg. or interrog. sentence, ut, or more emly qui (with subj.). No man is so senseless as to believe this, nemo tam delirus est, ut (or qui) hæc credat. [quis potest tam aversus a vero esse,—qui neget, &c.]—As NOT to, quin. No food is so hard as not to be digested, &c., nullus cibis tam gravis est, quin is—concoquatur.

VI) MISCELLANEOUS PHRASES with AS. Be it as it may, utcumque res est or erit.—As WAS LIKELY; AS WAS SURE TO HAPPEN: id, quod necesse erat accidere.—As PEOPLE SAY, ut dicunt, ferunt, or alunt: ut dicitur, traditur, or fertur. As you observed, &c., id quod dixisti, &c.: as all allow, id quod omnes consentitur, &c.—As QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE, quam celerrime: AS SHORTLY AS POSSIBLE, quam brevissime: AS FAR AS I CAN, quoad ejus facere possum: AS FAR AS POSSIBLE, AS FAR AS CAN BE DONE, quoad ejus neri potest. As it were (softening a strong word, &c.), qual. As far as appearance goes, ad speciem [e. g. forum adornatum ad speciem magnifico ornatu. C.]. As far as I know, quod sciam. As far as I can with a good conscience, quod salvâ fide et salvo officio possim. But with quantum such limitations are in the indic. [quantum—intelligo.]

ASBESTOS, asbestos. amiantus (not our asbestos, but amianth).

ASCEND, ascendere. — sublime ferri. sublimem abire (of mounting on high, into the clouds, &c.: the latter only of living things). To a. gradually, gradatim ascendere. TRANS. To a. a wall, murum ascendere: a tree, in arborem inscendere: the rostrum, in rostra (in conclonem) escendere; ascendere in rostra: to a. the pulpit, *in sacrum suggestum ascendere: the throne, *in regiam sedem escendere (prop.); regnum adipsi. regnum occupare (of obtaining royal power: the latter only unlawfully). FIG. To ascend to honours, &c., ascendere ad honores, ad altiore gradum; also without ad. promoveri ad or in ampliore gradum. The ascending lines (in genealogical tables), gradus ascendentium (Paul. Dig.).

COMEDIAN, artifex scenicus (q. t.). comædus, the singer of the canticum (recitativo, monologue) in comedy, opp. tragedus (in tragedy). actor comicus, or comicus only (κωμικός, κωμῳδός). They all designate the actor in general who appears in comedy, not the person who acts the low comic parts, who, qst. Petron. 80, 9, can only be called pi paries ridendos agit: all the actors in a comedy, excaleari (opp. cothurnati, tragedians, Sen. Ep. 87). See also ACTOR.—Writer of comedy, *poeta scenicus (q. t.): poeta comicus, or comicus only, epylli comici, pl.: like a c., *scenicorum more. comico inore. scenicus (q. t., e. g. complodere manus et pectus ferire scenicus est).—Comic actress, artifex scenica, or scenica only (in later times).

COMEDY, comœdia.—fabula Atellana (sort of farce amongst the Romans): relating or belonging to c., comicus (κωμικός, opp. tragicus): in a manner belonging to c., comice. Comic character (i. e. in comedy), partes ridendæ. See also PLAY. To act a c., see TO ACT.

COMET, cometes, sidus cometes, stella cometes (comætes)—or in pure Lat. stella crinita (Suet. Cas. 88).—One of the three first expressions is generally used, or stella crinita, quam Græci κομήτην vocant, or quam cometa vocant (C. N. D. 2, 5, 14. Plin. 2, 25, 22, and even as late as Suet. Claud. 46, and Eutrop. 10, 8 (4)); hence it follows that stella crinita may be looked upon more as an attempt to translate κομήτης, than as a genuine Lat. expression. The c. remained above the horizon for four hours every night, stella cometes quum oriretur et occumberet, quatuor spatium horarum consumebat: the c. shone during seventy days, and with such splendour that the whole sky seemed to be on fire, stella cometes septuaginta diebus ita luxit, ut cœlum omne flagrare videretur.

Mummus tam rudis fuit, ut &c., i. e. was so little of a c. that &c.; homo imperitus, ignarus, of atq, cs rel.

CONNUBIAL, see CONJUGAL.

CONQUER, vincere (g. i.). —superare (to overcome; both prop. and improp. c. g. the enemy, difficulties). Jx. vincere et superare. —domare (to tame, stronger term than vincere, see Flor. 4, 12, 30). Germani victi magis quam domiti erant). —profligare (to overthrow a hostile army so completely, that it cannot be rallied again). —subigere (see SYN. under SUBDUCE). —strangere (fig. to break the power of atq, e. g. of a passion). —imperare (fig. to govern, command, have the empire of, &c., e. g. the passions, cupiditatibus). To c. entirely, devincere (in a general battle); perdomare (to tame entirely); prosternere (prop. 'to dash to the ground'; hence, to discomfit, defeat utterly). To be conquered, inferiorem discedere; victum or superatum recedere: to have never been c'd, semper superiorem or victorem discessisse: to confess oneself c'd, manus dare (also with addition, vincique se pati, see Hers. Cæs. B. G. 5, 31). To c. oneself, se ipsum or animum vincere; animum contundere (if by very violent measures). To c. (towns or countries), capere. potiri (qâ re). occupare. expugnare.

CONQUERABLE, qui (quæ, quod) vinci, domari, expugnari potest; superabilis (O. T.); vincibilis (Ter., easy to gain, causa). —expugnabilis (e. g. urbs, L.).

CONQUERED, formed by the past participle of the verbs in To CONQUER.

CONQUEROR, victor. —expugnator with Gen. (c. of a town, urbs). —domitor (with Gen., expugnator, e. g. of Spain, Hispaniæ). —Pompey's troops considered themselves already the c.'s, Pompejani vicissim jam sibi videbantur: to come off c., victorem or superiorem discedere: to be the c. of aby or atq, see To CONQUER.

CONQUEST, occupatio (the taking possession of). —expugnatio (the taking by storm). —victoria (victory). To make great c.'s, magnas terras expugnare: to consolidate one's c.'s, firmo ea, quæ bello subegi: to retain one's c.'s, *parts retinere. See VICTORY.

CONSANGUINEOUS, sanguine conjunctus. consanguineus (†).

CONSANGUINITY, consanguinitas; sanguinis conjunctio, communio, or by Crel. with sanguine qm attinere; sanguine cum q conjunctum esse.

CONSCIENCE, conscientia virtutis et vitiorum conscientia factorum. conscientia animi or mentis (the consciousness of having done right or wrong, for which, in classic prose, conscientia never stands alone, unless the gen. of 'virtute,' or 'guilt,' is implied by the context).—religio (scruple); also conscientiosus, vid.

(conscientiosus). A good c., conscientia bona (Cels. 2, 15, 32. Q. 6, 1, 33, and 9, 2, 93. T. Agr. 1, 2); conscientia recta (C. Att. 13, 20, 4); but more usually conscientia recte facti or recte factorum or pulcherrimi facti; conscientia recte voluntatis; conscientia optime mentis; mens bene sibi conscia; also bonae mentis fiducia; but seldom conscientia (*C. Att. 12, 23, 2); a very good c., conscientia optima (Plin. Ep. 1, 12, 3); but conscientia egergia saepe repetiti regni patrum is = 'a noble, lofty feeling of the mind, satisfied with itself,' L. 29, 33, 9); to have a good c., nullius culpe sibi conscius esse; sustentari preclara conscientia sua: to console oneself with a good c., optime mentis conscientia se consolari: a person who has a good c., homo integer et bonus (integer vitae scelerisque purus is poet.). A bad c., conscientia mala (S. Jug. 62, 8. Q. 12, 1, 3); but more usually conscientia delictorum or peccatorum or malefactorum or scelerum; also mens male sibi conscia; animus sibi conscius; in the contexti also conscientia only: to have a bad c., conscientia morderi (see REMOVAL). To read a bad c. in ab's face, conscientiam notas in ipso ore es deprehendere: with a good c., sine sollicitudine religionis (without scruple, Trajan. Plin. Ep. 10, 62); salva fide; salvo officio; salva legibus; bona mente or bono animo (but never bona or salva conscientia); also liquido (with perfect certainty, without scruple, e. g. to say, to maintain, to take an oath, dicere, affirmare, jurare, see Rahk. Ter. Andr. 4, 3, 14): I swear with a good c., ex animi sententia juro: I can take my oath of it with a good c., liquet mihi dejerare (Ter. Eum. 2, 3, 40); or liquido possum jurare: as far as you can with a good c., quantum fides tua patietur: my c. does not allow me to pass over in silence, that &c., illud me tacere conscientia mea non patitur, quod &c. (see L. 5, 25, 6): I cannot do this with a good c., hoc sine scelere fieri nullo pacto potest: to attribute a thing to an evil c., qd in conscientiam ducere (see Sall. Jug. 85, 26); ab's feels the sting of a c., conscientia mordetur qs; conscientia animi stimulat or terret qm; angore conscientie agitantur: qm conscientia malefactorum suorum stimulantur: the voice of c. is powerful, magna est vis conscientiae: the stings of a c., angor conscientiae fraudulose eructantur: a man without a c., homo sine illa religione se fide: to have no c., sine ulla religione se fide esse; ubi religioni sibi habere (Afr. Cic. de Div. 1, 35, in.). To make a c. of not doing (or not to do) a thing (i. e. my conscientious scruples prevent my doing it), religio mihi est; subit animum religio, both with infm.: to make no c. of doing a thing (e. g. to kill ab's, &c.), religio ei non est, with following quo minus; non habet religionem, with infm.: the people make a c., res illa in religionem venit populo: I make no c. of doing it (feel no scruple about it), nulla mihi religio est (Hor. Sat. 1, 9, 76): I will take that on my c., culpam in me transferas or transferas (Afr. Ter. Andr. 2, 3, 8). Upon my c., I don't know, ne vivam, si scio: for upon my c., I did think so, nam, ita vivam, putavi (hoc, illud): I ask you on your c., have you a wife I ex tui animi sententia tu uxorem habes? (see C. de Ex. 2, 64, extr.). Cases of c., vid. under CAUSE (end).—[Conscientiosus, vid.]

CONSCIENTIOUS, religiosus; sanctus; severus; justus (SYN. CONSCIENTIOSUS). To be c. in a thing, religionem adhibere: to devote [in the c. performance of a duty, a religious officii] declinare: in the most c. manner, optima fide (e. g. to pay ab's, cf. qd annuere): sanctissime (e. g. tueri religiones publicas).

CONSCIENTIOUSLY, religiose; sancte; severe.—diligenter (exactly, punctually).

<sup>1</sup> [62] The phrase 'to make a conscience,' appears to be used with some difference of meaning; thus, 'we must make a c. in keeping the just laws of superiors' (Jerr. Taylor) = 'we must observe them religiously.' But L'Estrange uses: 'to make a c. of betraying for gold,' in the sense of not betraying for gold from a conscientious principle of duty. Locke says, 'we must make c. not to mislead children.' Hence we must consider whether the meaning of 'making a c.' is the making it a point of c. to do the thing in question, or not to do it.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS, religio (e. towards the gods and all weh concerns them, e. g. of a judge who acts faithfully to his oath, &c.).—sanctitas (severe integrity, as quality of one who, respecting the laws of God and man, shrinks fm avarice, rapacity, oppression, &c.). severitas (strict c., as quality of him who practices justice and right without partiality).—justitia (love of justice and equity).—fides (faith and honesty, in general, towards those with whom we deal): Jx. religio ac fides.—diligentia (exactness, punctuality, in general): c. in giving advice, religio in consilio danda.

CONSCIOUS. To be c., conscius sibi esse ea rei, or with Accus. and Infin.: not to be c. of any guilt, not to be c. of a thing, nullius sibi culpae conscius esse; nihil conscire sibi (H. Ep. 1, 1, 61): I am perfectly c. of it, bene memini. I am c. how, that &c., scio (if it is a matter of knowledge); sentio (if it is a felt conviction, e. g. si quid est in me ingenii, quod sentio quam sit exiguum, &c.). I am not c. that I was ever, &c., conscius mihi sum, numquam me fuisse, &c. (C.).

CONSCIOUSLY, sciens. prudens. Jx. sciens ac prudens.

CONSCIOUSNESS, conscientia (also, in a more limited sense of the word = the c. of having acted rightly).—sensus (feeling). The c. of having acted rightly, conscientia recte factorum: the c. of having lived a holy life and done much good, is a pleasant feeling, conscientia bene actae vitae multorumque benefactorum recordatio jucundissima est: I have the c. of having acted rightly, mihi conscius sum, recte me fecisse.

CONSCRIPT, conscriptus.—novus miles.—tiro miles, tiro (a newly levied soldier, opp. vetus miles, veteranus). The c.'s, milites thrones; milites in supplementum lecti; also supplementum (as supplementary troops): to supply the army by c.'s, supplere; explere supplemento; delectibus supplere; supplementum scribere cl.

CONSCRIPTION, delectus (of soldiers).—conquisitio militum (stronger term). A strict c. is ordered, 'acer delectus denunciatur: delectus acerbitas (L.). To raise 30,000 troops by the c. rigidly enforced, intensissima conquisitione ad triginta millia peditum conficere.

CONSECRATE, ¶ To make holy by ceremonies, dedicare. inaugurare (to c.; inaug. also in speaking of a person, e. g. of a priest. [63] dedicare is only used of things who relate immediately to the cultus of the gods, as statues, images, altars, temples, &c.: if it was performed by the augurium, it was termed inaugurare).—consecrare (to make holy or sacred, of a thing, even of fields and animals: the consecratio might be performed by ab's, the ded. only by a magistrate, to whom the pontifex, in that case, repeated or dictated the customary form of words).—cultui divino sacre (to c. for purposes of worship, Ammon.). To c. an altar, aram dedicare, consecrare: to c. a temple to a god, deo templum dedicare or templum consecrare: to c. ab's (as a god), qm deum consecrare. Consecratus, sacratus; consecratus; sacer (holy, as the quality of the gods); religiosus (sacred).—Pie.—to dedicate, dedicare. dicare.—offerre (to offer).—dis primitias offerre. To c. one's life to the service of one's country, vitam suam totam patriae dedere.

CONSECRATION, consecratio, dedicatio [SYN. IN CONSECRATE]. C. also = apotheosis (T. Ann. 13, 2, extr. Suet. Dom. 2): the c. of a priest, consecratio (Inscr. Græc. 303, 2, see TO CONSECRATE). [64] Inauguratio is without any classical authority. To receive c., consecrari: the feast of the c. of a thing, dies rei inaugurandae consecrandae sacer.

CONSECUTIVE, continens, continuous (following immediately one after the other without interruption).—contextus (hanging one on the other, not interrupted).—ordine (according to order, in turn).—alter post alterum. alius post alium (one after the other, the former in speaking of two: the latter of several persons). During three c. days, triduum continuum; tres dies continui: what have you been doing for so many c. days? quid tot continui dies egisti?

CONSECUTIVELY, continenter (in one succession, in one continuance, continue and continuo, un. Class.).—deinceps (successively, one after another).

CONSENT, consensio, consensus.—assensus.—St voluntas (the will): permissio (permission, a q. that ab's may remain where he is, mansio, C. ad Qu. Fr. 3, 1, 3).—clementia (indulgence in a thing, c.).—auctoritas, jussus (c. of any superior, the former in Rome of the senate, the latter of the people). With your c., to consentiente, probante: with the c. of the people, secundo populo: with out your c., te adversante, renuente, nolente; Injussu tuo: with the full c. of Calulus, summā Catuli voluntate: with aby's c., ea permissu (i. e. permission): ea voluntate (with his good will, e. g. to do athg, facere qd): without aby's c., injussu ca (prop. without any order): with the c. of all, consensu omnium (i. e. with the concurrence of all in one opinion): they gave their unanimous c. that gc., assensu omnes permiserunt, ut &c.

CONSENTANEOUS, consentaneus, conveniens or congruus (all three with ci rei). See also CONFORMABLE.

CONSENTANEOUSLY, see CONFORMABLY.
